Comedy and Music Are On Two Bills at Loew's

James Dixon and George Gilday to Present New Comedy for First Half.

Music and comedy aplenty are to be the dominating features of the new bill which moves into Loew's Lyceum Sunday afternoon for the first half of the week. Two features of the bill are given over to comedy and two are devoted to the exposition of music.

James Dixon and George Gilday in their new laugh skit, "That's What I Told You," will be one of the featured acts of the first half. These two funsters have been scoring a hit over the Loew circuit for several weeks and it is their first visit to Memphis.

The other comedy number will be Harry Gilbert, a dialect singing funster whose repertoire of fun in the Irish, Jewish and Italian tongue is said to be most diverting and amusing.

Others to be found on the bill will include F. George, billed as the "Musical Chef," who plays on apparently anything he finds in the kitchen; John Rice and Beatrice Graham in a modern revue of musical comedy song, his and new dance steps, and the Anker Trio, novelty acrobats with a sailing board and a ship.

The feature film will be "The White Heather."

QUARTER MILLION PAID FOR 7,280 ACRES LAND

News has reached Memphis number circles of the purchase in fee simple from the Wisconsin-Louisiana Land company, Mansfield, Wis., of 7,280 acres of hardwood timber near Rayville, Richland parish, Louisiana, by Halbert & Williams of Inverness, Minn., for a consideration of $225,000.

The deal was handled by Bryant Seaman, of Monroe, and W. H. Whitley, through Davis & McMahon, of Greenville, Miss., and is said to be one of the best tracts of hardwood timber in the state.

The purchasers immediately will install an up-to-date band mill and begin cutting timber as soon as possible. A spur track to the mill site is now being laid. A deal has already been made by the new owners for the sale of the land at a good price as fast as the timber is removed.

As the land is said to be admirably suited for agriculture, timber men predict the purchasers will clear $500,000 on the deal.

FURNITURE MAN DIES ON HIS 38TH BIRTHDAY

Fifteen minutes after he had entered his home Friday evening, when he was seized with a coughing spell, Lott E. Salles, aged 38, an employee of the McConnell Furniture Co., was dead. Mr. Salles died on his 38th birthday.

Mr. Salles had been in ill health for about three years and only a few months ago returned from a trip to the West. He was a native of Pine Bluff, Ark., but had made Memphis his home for the past 15 years. For many years he had charge of one of the furniture company's local warehouses.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Louise Salles, and two brothers, Ben Salles, of Troup, Tex., and William Salles, of Pine Bluff. A cousin, Houston E. Daniels, of Memphis, also survives.

The funeral will be held from the home, 818 Washington avenue, Sunday afternoon, the Rev. Charles M. Murphy, of the Christian Alliance church, officiating. Interment will be in Elmwood.

HELENA OIL COMPANY WILL START DRILLING

HELENA, Ark., July 26. (Sp.)—The Eastern Arkansas Oil and Gas company, a local corporation, announces the arrival of the rig and other material and will start drilling on its first well. President Bas astrash, of the company, announces that his board does not know the exact location of the report of the geologist, which is expected in a few days. An experienced superintendent and driller are already on the job and Helena may soon be numbered among the boom for bums oil towns—according to the flow of oil.

NAVY TO BE REDUCED TO PRE-WAR STRENGTH

WASHINGTON, July 26. (Sp.)—The United States navy is to be reduced to pre-war strength without further delay. An order has been issued by Secretary Daniels addressed to commanders of all naval stations and ships instructing them to discharge all enlisted men who joined for the duration of the war. This rescinded an order issued in April under which discharges from the navy were to be made only in a limited series of cases.

U. S. AIRMAN REACHES 31,100 FEET ALTITUDE

GARDEN CITY, N. Y., July 26.—Claiming to have made a new altitude record, Roland Rohrer announced last night that he Thursday climbed to a height of 31,100 feet in a triplane, flying over Long Island between Mineola and Montauk. This mark is 2,300 feet better than the figure chalked up by Maj. E. W. Schroeder at Dayton, O., last September, in establishing the world's record for that time.

The present world's record is 33,136 feet, made by Adjutant Cassale, of the French army, in a flight from Villacoublay, France.

Miss Frederick At Majestic in New Love Play

"The Fear Woman" Tells of Girl's Romance Which Is Nearly Broken.

Interesting always and at times vividly dramatic, Pauline Frederick's newest picture, "The Fear Woman," which comes to the Majestic theater, beginning Sunday, embodies a distinct novelty in its theme. Its denouement is not only completely unexpected but is, moreover, true to feminine psychology. When Helen Winthrop (Pauline Frederick) deceives the man she loves, in thinking the worst of her and then, when she is sure that every one else shares his belief, suddenly lets him see the truth—this makes for perplexing drama and confirms popular belief in woman's baffling mental processes.

Consider the case of a girl who breaks her engagement to marry a man within two minutes of the ceremony, who leaves her home to seek diversion among strangers, and all because she is haunted by the fear of an hereditary weakness. She meets at a resort the foolish, fat son of an equally fat and foolish mother who, in desperation, summons her lawyer to talk common sense to Percy.

Think of the girl when she is confronted by the lawyer, who happens to be the man she cast off—and still loves. Does she tell him she does not care for the fellow who is dangling after her? Does she say that she has never forgotten the lawyer? Not in the least.

Helen Winthrop deliberately holds him at bay, parries his inquiries with bitingly sarcastic remarks and altogether plays at being a sphinx without a secret. Not only that; she plans to put him to a test far more exacting than she ever dreamed would be possible. Deliberately the girl pretends that the curse of her ancestors—drink—has taken possession of her. When her new-found friends shrink from her and the mother of Percy gloats over Helen's supposed downfall, she is thrilled by the faith her lover shows in her.

This is her supreme triumph. Laughingly she casts off her mask, recalls the play of "David Garrick," in which intoxication is simulated with heart-breaking effect, and lets the truth shine from her eyes—and ginger-ale in her glass tell it.

This is the brilliant climax in "The Fear Woman" and Pauline Frederick blends comedy and tragedy with superb effect.

"Choosing a Wife," which will be seen at the Majestic theater for three days, starting Thursday, tells the remarkable story of a man who for three years, until he was in the South Seas and when he comes back he suddenly finds himself called upon to choose between the woman whom he should rightfully marry and the woman he really loves.
